Negotiation isn't just part of your everyday life, it is crucial to your professional success. It is also a skill that benefits from training and development. For legal practitioners, completion of this training will fulfill the pre-requisites for designating yourself as a Collaborative Practitioner pursuant to Rule 1620 of the Law Society of Saskatchewan.

Collaborative Law is one of the fastest growing modes of dispute resolution processes throughout North America. Brought to Saskatchewan in 2001 by senior family law practitioners, globally its use and benefits now extend to estate disputes, commercial contracts and lease agreements, small closely held corporate disputes, employment issues, wrongful dismissal, and more. Collaborative Law is designed to meet the growing client demand for client centered settlement processes.

The Trainers

Glen Gardner is currently the Director of The Dispute Resolution Office, Ministry of Justice and Attorney General for the Province of Saskatchewan. Glen and his colleagues at the Dispute Resolution Office have been using and teaching Interest Based Negotiations and Collaborative Processes for over 20 years in a wide range of applications. Glen is also a Sessional Lecturer in Negotiation and Dispute Resolution at the College of Law, University of Saskatchewan and Negotiation Instructor for the Saskatchewan Bar Admissions Course. He has taught interest based negotiations to collaborative lawyers in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Elaine Seifert, Q.C. and Laurie McMurchie of Calgary, Alberta. Elaine Seifert, Q.C. is a lawyer and specialist in alternate dispute resolution with an LL.M in Alternate Dispute Resolution from Straus Institute, Pepperdine School of Law. She presents mediation, negotiation and conflict management seminars and trainings to the medical, legal and business communities in Alberta. Laurie McMurchie has practised family law for 30 years and currently restricts her practice to mediation, negotiation and collaborative practice. Laurie is an experienced presenter and trainer in interest based negotiations and the collaborative practice. Both Elaine and Laurie have instructed Interest-based Negotiations for Collaborative Lawyers and Introductory Collaborative Law for family, estate and trust lawyers in both Alberta and Saskatchewan.
